

A woman is shown from the chest up, wearing a black sequined mask that covers her eyes and forehead. She has dark, wavy hair and is wearing large, ornate gold earrings with a central eye-like motif and teardrop pendants. Her lips are painted a vibrant red. She is holding a small, dark object in her right hand. The background is a solid pink color. The text "Gender Studies" is overlaid in a large, bold, pink font, and the year "2025" is in a smaller, bold, pink font inside a dark grey circle in the bottom right corner.

Summary: There is a pivotal sea change happening in children's development. The age of puberty has been trending earlier for decades, and now starts as young as 8 years old in girls and 9 in boys. Bullying doesn't just happen on the playground, but over text and DM. Depression and anxiety are drastically on the rise. Couple earlier puberty with ill-equipped, developing brains and the onslaught of new media and stressors that never existed when we were kids, and it's clear that parents need a new guide to raise this new generation.

The game-changing book about sex and consent that every woman—and man—should read, a battle cry from a generation no longer prepared to stay silent.

Summary: When Chanel Contos asked followers on Instagram to share their stories of sexual assault, her post went viral. Almost 7,000 people provided testimonies. Virtually none of these incidents had been reported to authorities, and almost all of them were perpetrated by people the victims knew.

Why is sexual assault so widespread and rampant in an era of growing equality? Contos argues that when it comes to sex, we are still working with an outdated social contract that privileges men's pleasure at the expense of women's humanity.

Summary: Misogyny is not a thing of the past. Despite undeniable progress for women and girls in the 20th and 21st centuries, misogyny persists in our culture--often in ways that are more subtle and more insidious than the outright sexism of the past, and in spaces that we overlook or excuse as normative. If we hope to disrupt and eventually heal from misogyny, we must first be able to identify and understand it.

From Sarah Weinman, author of Scoundrel and The Real Lolita, comes an eye-opening story about the first major spousal rape trial in America and urgent questions about women's rights that would reverberate for decades.

Summary: In December 1978, Greta Rideout bravely testified that her husband, John, whom she still lived with, had raped her. She was the first woman in United States history to do this, at a time when the idea of "marital rape" seemed ludicrous to many Americans and was a crime in only four states. After a quick and conservative trial acquitted John Rideout and a defense lawyer lambasted that rape was perhaps "the risk of being married," Greta was ridiculed and scorned from public life, while John went on to be a repeat offender. Stephen Marche

In one of the most talked about books of the year, provocative cultural commentator Stephen Marche examines the state of male-female relations in the 21st century, with commentary from his wife, Toronto Life editor-in-chief Sarah Fulford.

On a warm spring morning in New York City, Stephen Marche, then a new father and tenure-track professor, got the call: his wife had been offered her dream job . . . in Toronto. Their mutual decision to move home, prioritizing her career over his, shed new light on the gender roles in their marriage. It also provoked a surprising and divided response from the world around them.

The Furies

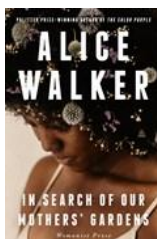

Elizabeth Flock

Elizabeth Flock, the renowned journalist and author of The Heart Is a Shifting Sea, investigates what few dare to confront, or even imagine: the role and necessity of female-led violence in response to systems built against women.

“A remarkable and important exploration—reported with deep rigor and care—of what justice looks like for women who have been stripped of power and are trying to reclaim it.”—Rachel Aviv, author of Strangers to Ourselves

“A captivating examination of violence and power. . . This one will stick with readers.”—Publishers

In Search of Our Mothers' Gardens

Alice Walker

A new edition of the groundbreaking classic essay collection from the Pulitzer Prize-winning author of The Color Purple in which she coins the term “womanist” as she speaks out as a Black woman, a writer, a mother, and a feminist on topics ranging from the personal to the political

“When I graduated from college as an undergraduate, my father gave me Alice Walker’s In Search of Our Mothers’ Gardens. It was a beaten-up paperback in 1999, and it’s even more battered now.”—Jesmyn Ward, in the New York Times Book Review

Why Young Men

Jamil Jivani

The critics agree: "Why Young Men is a much-needed discussion" (J. D. Vance, author of Hillbilly Elegy)

The day after the 2015 Paris terror attacks, twenty-eight-year-old Canadian Jamil Jivani opened the newspaper to find that the men responsible were familiar to him. He didn't know them, but the communities they grew up in and the challenges they faced mirrored the circumstances of his own life. Jivani travelled to Belgium in February 2016 to better understand the roots of jihadi radicalization. Less than two months later, Brussels fell victim to a terrorist attack carried out by young men who lived in the same

The Bitch Is Back

Cathi Hanauer

More than a decade after the New York Times bestselling anthology The Bitch in the House spoke up loud and clear for a generation of young women, nine of the original contributors are back—along with sixteen captivating new voices—sharing their ruminations from an older, stronger, and wiser perspective about love, sex, work, family, independence, body image, health, and aging: the critical flash points of women's lives today

"At once thrilling and reassuring. It's the discomfort of the topics that provides comfort, a sense that however knotty our lives have turned out, they're far more normal than we think. The essence of the human condition has been understood

What Do Women Want?

Daniel Bergner

"At last, we have a new perspective on the wilds of female desire, in rousing tableaux, as women, men, sexologists, bonobos, erotic gurus, and many others provide frank, vivid answers to the question that has haunted [us] for far too long: What do women want? The answer will fascinate all." —Diane Ackerman, author of A Natural History of Love
